strings trees with colored lights, and tows to their positions where they are anchored and strung with electrical wire.

Coyote Prevention Tips

Residents are reminded to follow important safeguards to protect pets and property against coyotes. Coyotes are found in every state of the nation, except for Hawaii, and it's not uncommon to see one walking down a busy street. Coyotes do not require open space to survive, and have adapted to living in close proximity to humans. Coyotes can be seen at any time of day, though they are most active at dusk, dawn, and at night. The following techniques are recommended to compassionately co-exist with coyotes, and to protect yourself and your pets:

Never run from a coyote. Running from a coyote can instigate the coyote's prey instinct to chase.

Never feed coyotes or any other wildlife.

Keep pets and pet food inside. If feeding outside, feed pets during the day (no more than one hour), supervise feeding, and remove the food bowls when finished.

Stay close to pets when taking them outdoors, and always keep them on a leash, especially from dusk through early morning hours.

Remove fallen fruit from the ground

Food waste should be bagged and trash containers should be closed securely to prevent opening if knocked over by an animal.

Use “hazing” techniques such as standing tall, yelling and waving arms while approaching the coyote; using a whistle, banging pans together or stomping feet; flashing bright lights, using a water hose; or throwing tennis balls toward the coyote.

An Animal Control Officer will respond to coyote calls if the coyote is sick or injured, out in the daytime in areas around people, or anytime there is an attack or threatening behavior toward a person or pet.

The City of Long Beach instituted a Coyote Management Plan to respond to concerns about coyotes, including gathering data about coyote activity. It is important to make reports about coyotes activity and encounters to Long Beach Animal Care Services. For more information about the Coyote Management Plan, or to report coyote encounters, visit www.longbeach.gov/acs/ wildlife. If a coyote is posing a threat to life, call 911.

Congratulations to Raul Martinez, Park Maintenance Supervisor, for the City Employee of the Month Award for November. The Grounds Maintenance Division has benefited tremendously from his knowledge and dedication.

Raul's approach to his job is equal parts experience, curiosity and a great desire not to let a challenge go unresolved. Of the many contributions he has made to the Ground's Maintenance group, one of the most important is the completion of the Central controller inventory and bringing the 2 million dollar project to fruition. This will allow both our gardeners and our contractors to be more effective in the field and more responsive to water conservation issues and goals.

It is his dedication and spirit of innovation that makes him invaluable to our City and the PRM family.
