What is an Alternative/Community Crisis Response Team?

- Specialized, non-law enforcement teams responding to eligible non-violent 911 calls for service with a focus on behavioral health and quality of life issues.
- Civilian teams focused on connections to service rather than enforcement
- Most teams include mental health professional, medical professional, and service/peer navigator
- National examples include CAHOOTS (Eugene, OR), Denver STAR, and Portland Street Response

Long Beach and Alternative Response Team Development

Framework for Reconciliation

- Following the murder of George Floyd, the Long Beach City Council engaged in an earnest conversation about racism as a public health crisis, the need to restore public trust in City government, and how to reconcile a gap in the experiences of impacted and vulnerable people with current City policies, especially the Black community.
- The protests and public outcry in Long Beach led the City Council to unanimously adopt a Framework for Reconciliation.
- Alternative Models for Addressing Nonviolent Calls for Service is included as one the Framework's potential actions.
- Locally this team will be known as the Community Crisis Response Team (CCR)

Impacts of Diverting Low Priority Calls for Service

1. Specialized Expertise in Response
2. Improved Connection to Services and Intervention
3. Diversifying and Increasing Public Safety Resources
4. Reduction of Unintentional Escalation or Stigma
5. Reduction in Unnecessary Criminal Justice System Involvement

“To strengthen outcomes for the community and law enforcement alike...Community Responders (CRs) could be dispatched for...calls for service that do not always require police presence, like behavioral health and low-level community conflicts”
