

City of Long Beach
Honorable Mayor
City Council:

RECEIVED
CITY CLERK
LONG BEACH, CALIF.

CIT-11

Sept. 12, 2005

With violent crime spreading and escalating rapidly in our city; with the growing imminent threat of the loss of more human life; there is no greater budgetary priority than the adoption, in the Annual (2005-2006) Budget, than, first, providing for the memorialization of sufficient funds, (as proposed by Chief Batts), to, as quickly as possible, increase the public safety officers on our police force - by adding 309 additional new personnel.

Yet, the Budget, before you to-night, (9-13-05) provides funding for only two more officers;

Therefore, as the Acting President of "Community for Affordable and Secure Housing", "CASH", (representing rapidly growing numbers of Long Beach residents); please, see attached petitions, pp. 1-6). I find the proposed Annual Budget, egregiously unjust, inequitable, unsustainable, and unacceptable.

It will not quell the rapidly increasing rate of violence, deaths and fear in our neighborhoods.

Yours truly,
Daniel L. Rosenberg
(for "CASH")

Robert Walker Jr. was slain in his wheelchair on Almond Ave.

By Kristopher Hanson
Staff writer

Sunday, July 17, 2005 - LONG BEACH - A year has passed since Robert Walker Jr. was gunned down while sitting outside his home, but the pain of that sudden loss is still raw for family and friends.

Robert's fiancé, Bernadette, has struggled to make sense of his senseless death, replaying the happy moments they shared with their infant daughter Kyla over and over in her mind.

She carries on through support of family, a strong will and an unshakable faith in Jesus Christ.

"My feelings are all bogged," Bernadette said. "I look at my daughter and see Robert and I am happy and heartbroken at the same time."

Detectives are still working the case, but with no new leads, the investigation has ground to a halt.

Robert, a standout football player at Millikan High, survived being shot several times in 1995, when he was 19. Although initially told he would never again walk, Robert trained hard to gain strength in his legs and could stand and take a few steps unaided by the time Kyla was born.

At 10:30 p.m. last July 19, Robert was sitting in his wheelchair outside a duplex near Fourth Street and Almond Avenue when a man walked up to some people standing down the street and began shooting.

When the shooter missed his original target, he walked north to where Robert was sitting. By that point, everyone milling outside that hot summer night had run or ducked for safety.

Robert was apparently an easy target, investigators said.

As the 28-year-old father wheeled his chair into the driveway, the gunman shot him twice in the back.

Paramedics rushed him to a hospital, where he died a short time later.

Robert's slaying marked the beginning of a deadly six-month span on residential Almond Avenue.

On Aug. 8, 21-year-old Cesar Duclona was fatally shot while kicking a soccer ball outside an apartment complex just down the street from the site of Walker's shooting.

A third shooting on Dec. 23 left one man dead and another injured. That attack occurred at Fourth Street and Almond Avenue, adjacent to an apartment building police had raided during an investigation into a gang shooting that summer.

For a time last year, police instituted foot patrols in the neighborhood to quell the violence, which they believe was the result of an ongoing gang feud that occasionally caught bystanders like Robert in the crossfire.

Family members still hold out hope that Robert's killer will be brought to justice, and the cycle of violence that plagued Almond Avenue in the last six months of 2004 won't flare up.

"Now I just bury my efforts into my daughter and try not to deal with my feelings," Bernadette said. "I don't believe that I could afford that. I love our daughter more than feeling sorry for my loss."

Anyone with information is asked to call Long Beach Homicide Detectives Chris Cardoza or Dan Mendoza at (562) 570-7244. Tipsters can remain anonymous.

PETITION 091

We, the undersigned residents of the City of Long Beach, CA, petition our elected officials to memorialize monies in the operating ANNUAL BUDGETS to provide sufficiently for the deployment of day and night police foot patrols in our high violent crime neighborhoods.

PRIMARY ELECTION -- JUNE 5, 1990

ARGUMENT AGAINST PROPOSITION E

Let's stop playing political games with the lives and property of Long Beach residents!

Let's pay overtime to adequate numbers of experienced officers to patrol high-crime areas, until, 164 new officers and 70 civilian support personnel, (as recommended by Chief Binkley in August 1988, and by the Public Safety Advisory Commission on 1/10/90), are recruited, fully trained, and ready for duty.

I urge a no vote on Proposition E on June 5, 1990 for the following reasons:

(1) Even if Proposition E, by some miracle, received the required 2/3 vote, according to Long Beach police officers--it would, ultimately, result in the addition of only 3 patrol cars to each of 3 large areas of the city.

(2) Proposition E provides an official (political) excuse, not to, immediately, and finally, redefine our city-wide budgetary priorities. (The new '90-'91 city budget must be prepared and presented to the Mayor and City Council on, or before 5-1-90. It must be approved, in its final form, no later than July 1, 1990.)

(3) More police can relieve some of the symptoms of our politically and socially dysfunctional system -- symptoms called "crime", but not stem the rising tide of crimes spawned by irrational, unbalanced overdevelopment. Growth permitted and sanctioned by a Mayor, other elected, and appointed officials who are politically indebted to several, privileged, special-interest groups for the bulk of their political campaign funds.

(4) We should not lock ourselves into a "Mello - Roos Facilities District." Legally, it is a form of fiscal entrapment escape is difficult.

(5) The maintenance of public security and peace is one of the most basic governmental services. It should not depend upon a special tax. It should continue to be paid for out of general revenues and the general fund.
