The Commission had concerns regarding terry stops being humiliating for the party involved. They recommended that officers should make every effort to engage suspects in a friendly, non-confrontational way without an immediate search unless there is a reason to suspect that the person poses an immediate and identifiable threat. If someone asks for an officer's badge number, the officer should be courteous. If someone is detained and ends up not being a suspect, the officer should proactively give them their badge number, possibly on a business card. The Commission recommended that officers should introduce themselves when possible and for the Long Beach Police Department (LBPD) to look at creating a customer service initiative for the LBPD that every officer needs to take on an annual or bi-annual basis.
